Achieving Invincible Single-hearted Unity

Public procession marches forward displaying the might of the single-hearted unity between the leader, the Party and the people

On June 19, 50 years ago, Kim Jong Il started work at the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea. Greeting the day, all the service personnel and people of the DPRK recollect with deep emotion the immortal exploits he accomplished for the Party and the revolution.

Today's reality that the WPK is displaying to the fullest its ever-victorious might and the DPRK is standing as a people-centred socialist state is borne of the outstanding and seasoned leadership of Kim Jong Il, who, regarding single-hearted unity as the most powerful weapon in accomplishing the cause of revolution from the first day of his start of work at the Party Central Committee, carried forward its glorious traditions in a pure form and developed it further.

The purity of single-hearted unity of the Party and revolutionary ranks achieved by President Kim Il Sung was safeguarded, consolidated and developed by Kim Jong Il.

The history of Kim Jong Il's leadership of the WPK is the history of attaching importance to unity and strengthening it: Holding fast to the single-hearted unity the President had created and achieved as a powerful weapon in carrying out the revolution and construction, he strengthened and developed it consistently.

Endowed with great intelligence and far-sighted political leadership ability, Kim Jong Il maintained consistently and implemented successfully the theory of unity formed with the leader as its centre and based on his revolutionary ideology throughout his leadership of the Party.

In the 1970s he advanced the programme of modelling the whole society on Kimilsungism and wisely led the work to implement it, thus solidifying in every way the organizational and ideological unity of the Party and the revolutionary ranks.

In the closing years of last century, when the anti-DPRK moves of the imperialists and reactionaries went to extremes, he closely rallied the army and people of the DPRK behind the leadership of the revolution and overcame the difficult and complicated situation by dint of its might. He thus safeguarded and exalted the national sovereignty.

He saw to it that all efforts in the ideological work of the Party were concentrated on strengthening the single-hearted unity of the whole Party and society based on the Juche idea and Songun idea, so that all the service personnel and people should cherish deep in mind the unshakeable truth that there are neither motherland nor revolution without the leader and endeavour to staunchly champion and thoroughly implement the Songun idea.

On the basis of the historical experience of the Korean revolution pioneered by arms and advanced by dint of arms he always directed primary efforts to strengthening the Korean People's Army and constantly strengthened the single-hearted unity of the Party and revolutionary ranks with the KPA as its core and the main force.

Putting forward the KPA as the core detachment and main force of the revolution, he led it to perform its mission and duty in realizing the single-hearted unity in the Songun era.

He also developed the single-hearted unity of the Party and revolutionary ranks into the pure crystallization of moral obligation based on the revolutionary comradeship and set ennobling examples of comradeship.

Thanks to the wise leadership of Kim Jong Il, the DPRK has achieved the single-hearted unity of the Party and the revolutionary ranks, which is more powerful than the nuclear weapons and has brought about the eye-opening successes in all fields of the socialist construction. The might of the DPRK's single-hearted unity has broken to pieces the anti-DPRK military pressure of the imperialists, their manoeuvres to infiltrate bourgeois ideology and culture and psychological smear campaigns. By dint of this unity the entire Party, army and people in the country have been armed with the spirit of defending the leadership of the revolution unto death and supported the intentions and plans of the leader with one purpose and will.

The army and people have achieved oneness in ideology and work style on the basis of the revolutionary soldier spirit created by the KPA, the hardcore detachment of the single-hearted unity, which inspired them to heroic exploits and increased production. The whole society has formed a great harmonious family in which all the people help and lead forward one another, and the great army-people unity is further consolidated as the basic foundation of society.

Single-hearted unity of the Party and revolutionary ranks achieved by Kim Jong Il, the greatest asset for and the pride of the Korean revolution, is now being carried forward and strengthened by Songun-based revolutionary leadership and benevolent politics of Kim Jong Un.

Kim Jong Il built the WPK into a motherly party which provides its people with an affluent cultural life. To this end he provided his people with more benefits of the Party and the state and erected excellent bases for their cultural and emotional life.

Cultural edifices across the country such as Pyongyang Grand Theatre, National Theatre, Taedongmun Cinema, North Hwanghae Provincial Art Theatre, and Songdowon Youth Open-Air Theatre, were newly built or reconstructed, while scenic spots in Mts. Chilbo, Jongbang and Kuwol and recreation grounds like the Central Zoo being newly created or renovated.

These grand changes were the results of his ceaseless high-intensity guidance tours. He visited ceaselessly factories and enterprises, cooperative farms, stockbreeding and fish farms, public service amenities, theatres and recreation grounds, streets and rural villages across the country, thereby ushering in a radical turning point in the improvement of the people's living standards.

It is his steadfast determination and will to make his people enjoy the benefits from socialism to their heart's content by raising a fierce wind of making a leap forward for building an economic giant and bettering the people's living standards.

Upholding his lofty intention the service personnel and people of the DPRK are making rapid progress in the building of a cultured socialist state so as to realize their ideals and dreams.

I Am Sure of Bright Future of Korea

Every time I visit the DPRK, I always feel that the Korean people have noble mind and fine characters, and are advancing vigorously along the road which they have chosen by themselves.

They are now holding fast to and adding brilliance to the exploits their former leaders have performed generation after generation.

It can be a good testimony to this that young generations are studying to their heart's content and bringing their talents into full bloom under the free education system and that Pyongyang is improving its appearances.

I am sure that hard-working and creative Koreans would realize the ideal and achieve the target to build a cultured socialist nation, upholding the lines and politics of the state.

It Was Impressive Days

I visited the DPRK for the first time to take part in the April Spring Friendship Art Festival.

Pyongyang was in warm spring, just like my Switzerland. Streets looked neat and clean, and flowers in full bloom, roadside trees sprouting fresh leaves, green areas and parks were all in good harmony with buildings, giving refreshing feelings.

Magnificent Korean-style buildings like Pyongyang Grand Theatre where I performed, were particularly striking among other architectural structures.

I sang on stage many songs including Arirang, a famous Korean song, and got a big hand. It made me happy. And I think it is very good to meet with other artistes from many countries of the world and understand each other.

Wherever I went I felt noble and beautiful traits of the Korean people, who are kind and good-mannered, and I didn't expect it until I came here.

I want to take opportunities as many as possible to get better understanding of Korea in the future.

Aerospace Exploration in the DPRK

Mark of the DPRK National Aerospace Development Administration

The DPRK, a manufacturer and launcher of artificial earth satellites, is fully exercising its legitimate and peaceful rights to explore space and making headway towards applying the cutting-edge technology in this field.

It succeeded in launching its first earth satellite Kwangmyongsong 1 on August 31, Juche 87 (1998), and Kwangmyongsong 2 in April Juche 98 (2009).

After successful launches of the two trial satellites, the scientists and technicians of the DPRK pushed forward with the development of applications satellite. The project was not all plain sailing, as the field of space exploration was a synthesis of advances in cutting-edge science and technology and, moreover, the imperialists and reactionaries of the world resorted more viciously to obstructive manoeuvres against the DPRK.

However, the scientists and technicians of the DPRK were fully determined to translate the wish of President Kim Il Sung and Chairman Kim Jong Il to conquer outer space: the great leaders had already provided a firm springboard for radically developing the country's space science and technology by advancing far-reaching plans for space exploration, unfolded a bright blueprint for building the country into a space power and consolidated inexhaustible potential of the Juche-based industry by dint of Songun. With such a determination space scientists and technicians braced themselves for the project and thus laid out material foundations for launching and controlling satellites.

When they were suffering the agony of the failure in launching an earth satellite, supreme leader Kim Jong Un encouraged them, saying they must not lose courage, and as man grows up having food, science develops further after failures. So they redoubled their efforts for another try, firmly resolved to carry out their leader's plan without fail.

On December 12, Juche 101 (2012), the launch vehicle Unha-3 loaded with the artificial satellite Kwangmyongsong 3-2, a solar synchronous, polar-orbiting satellite, blasted off at the Sohae Launching Site in Cholsan County, North Phyongan Province. Though it was a cold and snowy winter day unfavourable for satellite launch, the launch vehicle carried the satellite on a deliberately curved trajectory in regard of the sovereignty of neighbouring countries and the international laws and thus placed the satellite into its planned orbit at 9 minutes 27 seconds after take-off.

Artificial earth satellites of the DPRK are domestic product in its entirety ranging from the design, manufacture, assembly and launch to the monitoring after take-off. By doing so, the DPRK has fully demonstrated its cutting-edge level in space exploration technology for peaceful purpose.

As its space science and technology make rapid progress, the DPRK government has established the National Aerospace Development Administration to guide and administrate all aerospace activities in a unified way and passed the Law on Space Exploration, giving spurs to space development.

For Clean Environment

The Democratic People's Republic of Korea is conducting a brisk campaign of protecting environment involving the whole country and all the people.

All the lines and policies are formulated on the principles of giving top priority to people's health and interests and regarding them as absolute and placing environmental protection above all else.

The state has established the laws on environmental protection, prevention of air pollution, environmental assessment and others designed to prohibit by law negative impacts on ecological environment.

It is the foremost subject to be discussed in examining a plan for a construction project or a production building whether it will impact on surrounding environment.

Newly built industrial projects are provided with unified sewage treatment facilities by the state to strictly prevent environmental pollution.

Many nature reserves like the Paektusan International Biosphere Reserve and Ogasan Nature Reserve have been established across the country, contributing greatly to protecting environment and increasing natural resources.

On such occasions of months of the general mobilization for land management in spring and autumn the whole country conducts vigorous campaigns to plant trees and improve rivers and streams and other undertakings.

All the factories, industrial enterprises, public buildings and residential districts are equipped with ventilation facilities for collecting gas or dust and supervision stations set up across the country to prevent the environmental pollution and protect natural environment.

We scientists at the Environmental Science & Technology Research Centre are fully engaged in the research work to protect and improve the country's environment and have so far made successes in solving a lot of problems arising in reality.

We have worked out the planning method of environment conservation of Pyongyang, thus making it possible to conduct the work in a long-term and scientific way. We have also studied the techniques of purifying gas and arresting dust for industrial furnaces and boilers, techniques of industrial waste sewage disposal and depuratives and of growing pollution-free vegetables, the ways to improve the management of biodiversity and nature reserves and recycle wastes, and an authentication system to improve the environmental management in factories and enterprises.

We will pay closer attention to protecting ecological environment that has a bearing on human existence and strive further to provide people with a cultured life in a cleaner and more hygienic environment.

The national sketch festival, a biennial event since Juche 95 (2006), affords a good opportunity for the working people, youth and schoolchildren to enhance their level of cultural attainments and to show the fine arts development in the DPRK.

The fifth festival took place in February this year to celebrate the Day of the Shining Star, birthday of Chairman Kim Jong Il.

It displayed over 350 sketches on diverse themes of life presented by not only vocational artists but service personnel, working people, youth and students and other amateurs across the country.

There were eye-catching sketches presented by students from junior and senior middle schools and primary schools, and even kindergarten pupils.

At a Wading Pool Full of Happiness, First-year Student, Mushroom in My Home, A Newly Acquainted Friend and other pencil drawings depicted in a simple yet lifelike way the structures built in the country making rapid progress and people, including schoolchildren, enjoying a worthwhile life.

There were pencil drawings of children enjoying themselves at public service facilities, including At a Wading Pool Full of

From April 1 this year the universal 12-year compulsory education is being enforced in all the junior and senior middle schools, primary schools and kindergartens in the DPRK.

Among them is Unha Kindergarten No. 1, which is an institution of preschool education the state has provided free of charge for the children of scientists in the newly built Unha Scientists Street in Ryongsong District, Pyongyang, last year.

In sunny rooms of the kindergarten children are looking at pictures on their new textbooks, chattering about what they see. In the playing room children are engrossed in playing various intelligent games. They are also romping happily in the outdoor playing ground with a variety of amusement and sporting facilities.

Those with obvious aptitudes and liking for the arts learn musical instruments and rhythmic movements to develop their talents.

With a high sense of pride in and responsibility for bringing up future generations, the kindergarten teachers have created visual aids, photo materials and other teaching aids and methods which are conducive to educating the children.

Kwak Ae Suk, head of the kindergarten, said that a new teaching programme and textbooks for preschool education were put forward by the state in line with psychology of the kindergarten children. The new teaching program, she said, is aimed at developing the children's power of observation, intellectual and expressive faculties by making them study pictures in textbooks by themselves, speak freely of their thoughts and count numbers. At the same time, it is designed to give children much time to play intelligent games, sports and amusement games, being helpful in improving their ability of intellectual thinking and growing them brightly and cheerfully.

Special Foods of Pyongyang

Pyongyang, famous for its time-honoured history and beautiful scenery, has also its excellent food culture.

Typical foods of Pyongyang are cold noodles, onban and mung-bean pancake.

From olden times Pyongyang cold noodles have been widely known as a national dish of the Korean people.

The cold noodles are prepared with a traditional recipe unique to the Pyongyang area, including ingredients, broth, garnishing, and even bowls and coiling methods when they are served.

They are mainly made from buckwheat flour, which has been considered a health food, and are served in either water of pickled radishes, a specialty of Pyongyang, or meat broth, so they are more refreshing, sweeter and tastier than those made in other regions.

When serving Pyongyang cold noodles, a heap of noodles wound into a ball is put on a large bowl with little broth, garnished with kimchi, meat, pear, cucumber and egg, then topped with shreds of spring onion and red pepper, and poured with the rest of broth.

Pyongyang cold noodles have become symbolic of Korean noodles and a food representative of national foods for their good taste, distinctive appearance and dressing.

Pyongyang onban is boiled rice garnished with mung-bean pancake, chicken and mushroom and served in a chicken soup.

People in the Pyongyang area used to serve onban at wedding feasts, wishing the newlyweds a happy life. Afterwards it became famous and spread across the country.

Pyongyang onban is known as a nutritious food that brings together most of the nutritive substances indispensable to human body as well as a delicious one with a blend of various flavours.

Mung-bean pancake is another famous food in Pyongyang. In the olden times people in the Pyongyang area maintained a traditional custom of decorating the wedding table with a pile of pancakes on a high-bottomed plate. They even thought the wedding table without pancakes was not good.

Mung-beans are ground and fried in a round and flat shape. There are different local recipes for mung-bean pancake. In Pyongyang, they are made with mixtures of ground mung-beans and lard, and fried until they become yellowish brown in colour.

Pyongyang cold noodles, onban and mung-bean pancake are not only specialties of Pyongyang, but also famous national foods and pride of Korea.

Implementation Joint Declaration demanding that the joint national event to celebrate June 15 is held

At the historic north-south summit meeting held for the first time in Pyongyang on June 15, Juche 89 (2000), the North-South Joint Declaration based on the ideal of By Our Nation Itself was made public.

The declaration reflects the unanimous desire of the whole Korean people for national reunification instead of interests of a specific organization and individual or one side, so it clarifies the issues of principles and practical ways to improve inter-Korean relations and achieve the country's reunification in an independent and peaceful way and by the concerted efforts of the Korean nation.

No sooner had the joint declaration been adopted it earned broad support and sympathy from the entire Korean nation and imbued the whole country with an ardent desire for national reunification.

Regarding the June 15 Joint Declaration as a milestone for independent reunification, the south Korean people are conducting an active struggle against machinations of separatist forces at home and abroad, in response to the desire and demand of the fellow countrymen to open the gate to reunification by the efforts of the Korean nation itself.

The South Headquarters of the Pan-National Alliance for Korea's Reunification (Pomminryon), Solidarity for Implementing the South-North Joint Declaration, Solidarity for Democracy, People's Life, Peaceful Unification and Sovereignty and many other organizations in south Korea held seminars, press conferences, commemorative lectures and different meetings on the occasion of the anniversary of publication to issue statements, talks and appeals, earnestly calling for a vigorous reunification movement under the banner of By Our Nation Itself.

Solidarity for Unification in Pusan clarified that By Our Nation Itself is the idea based on the love for the country and nation that was geared to putting an end to the history of national division and achieving national reunification and prosperity, and the foremost principle and almighty sword the entire nation must hold fast to in its struggle for national reunification.

The South Headquarters of Pomminryon condemned the south Korean authorities for their policy of confrontation with their compatriots which threw a wet blanket on the north-south relations advancing towards a new era of national reconciliation and unity, reunification and prosperity and aggravated them by running amok in collusion with foreign forces.

Noting that the issue of Korean peninsula must be solved from the standpoint of By Our Nation Itself, instead of resorting to cooperation with the US, Japan, and the like, the Confederation of National Peasants Union demanded the south Korean authorities make positive efforts to promote inter-Korean relations. The Confederation of Democratic Trade Unions emphasized that the June 15 Joint Declaration would be implemented and an independent reunification realized when the entire Korean nation opposed the US, disturber to national unity, and join efforts to this end.

The South Headquarters of the Pan-National Alliance of Youth and Students for Korea's Reunification, saying that the joint declaration is the faith of our nation and By Our Nation Itself a sure guarantee for independent reunification and peaceful prosperity, stressed that youth and students would be in the vanguard of the struggle to destroy pro-American sycophants and anti-national and anti-reunification forces, with confidence in sure victory.

National reunification is a long-cherished desire of the entire Korean nation, and the tragic national division forced by foreign forces must be brought to an end.

The Korean nation, holding aloft the banner of the June 15 North-South Joint Declaration, will smash plots of separatists at home and abroad and surely achieve the country's reunification by their concerted efforts.

History Tells Who Started Korean War

The US imperialists set up a post on the 38th Parallel in a bid to fan up the north-targeted war fever

Dulles, US presidential envoy, makes a final examination of war preparations against northern half of Korea

A part of the letter sent by Dulles to Syngman Rhee, dated June 20, 1950

On June 25, 64 years ago, cities and villages of the DPRK were covered with fierce flames of the war the US imperialists and south Korean puppet army of Syngman Rhee-led regime started against it.

The Korean war was a gangster-like one unprecedented in the world history. Many historical materials from the documents of the US and south Korea seized during the war and other historical materials testify to the fact why they started the war by enlisting huge armed forces.

First of all, the Korean war was the extension of the deep-rooted criminal policy of aggression against Korea pursued by the US.

Since long ago the US had set it forward as its state policy to put Korea, gateway to the Asian Continent, under its domination in order to realize its ambition of seizing world hegemony. In pursuit of it, in 1845 the US presented to Congress a bill for demanding Korea open up to it. Then it constantly committed armed invasions by dispatching its warships, including General Sherman, and sending a lot of guides to aggression in the guise of missionaries.

The US policy of aggression against Korea continued through centuries before entering its full-scale implementation after World War II.

At that time the US regarded Korea as a site of political and military confrontation between socialism and capitalism in realizing its ambition of gaining world supremacy, an ideological battleground upon which the destiny of capitalist world may depend.

It was proved by an article in The Oregon Journal, dated January 21, 1950, which explained that the Korean peninsula, a perimeter of the Asian Continent, was the bridgehead for the most activities in the Pacific region and that the US set its foot on south Korea during and after WWII, in view of its strategic importance. It was also revealed in the letter sent to US President Harry Truman by Edwin W. Pauley, US presidential representative on reparations, after visiting north and south Korea in the early summer of 1946. He wrote in the summary of his views that frankly Korea was an ideological battleground upon which entire success of the US in Asia may depend.

US President Truman accepted his “counsel” as an American policy toward Korea and designated Korea as a “battlefield of ideology” on which all the US “successes” in Asia might rest. The US tried to realize its policy aimed at dominating the whole Korea by applying political and diplomatic methods, but in vain. So it attempted to achieve its aim with recourse to military aggression, that is, a war.

John Foster Dulles, who flew to south Korea as a special envoy of the United States, wrote to Syngman Rhee on June 20, 1950, “I attach great importance to the decisive role which your country can play in the great drama that is unfolding.” In his private telegram sent to Douglas MacArthur in January 1951, President Truman said that unity of forces of the “free world” must be achieved through the Korean war, so that they could counter the former Soviet Union, deal a blow to the political and military might of China and subordinate Japan to them, thus realizing their aim of gaining supremacy over Asia and the rest of the world.

The Korean war was a kind of way out the US found to overcome serious political and economic crises it faced at home.

Owing to the shrinkage in the munitions industry after WWII, unemployment was on the increase and the overall economy was caught in a vicious cycle in the US.

The British magazine Economist wrote that the United States needed a contributor to overcoming the crisis, so it found it unavoidable to start a war.

In 1950 the Truman administration and his ruling Democratic Party found themselves in political distress caused by the fierce attack by the Republicans for being submissive to communism. Being apprehensive over his political career, Truman had to gamble with the Korean war to tide over the crisis by showing his true nature as an anti-communist.

The US also had to start a war so as to rescue Syngman Rhee puppet regime of south Korea which was suffering from critical political and economic situations since 1949.

An American book, The Hidden History of the Korean War, concluded: “It would be most reasonable to figure that war was the last resort of crazy Syngman Rhee. As the last game the Syngman Rhee government drove the country into a civil war, unable to keep itself steady in face of economic destruction, domestic unrest, harassment by the hostile National Assembly since his defeat in May, and then the people’s leanings towards the peace statement of the north.”

As the historical materials show, the Korean war was a state policy of the US and a war of aggression.

However, the US imperialists could not but suffer an ignominious defeat by the Korean People’s Army and people who valued justice.

The US must remember that its invasion of Korea will be followed by Korean people’s victory, and thus never repeat its past mistake.

The Mural Hunting

The mural Hunting is drawn on the western wall of the inner chamber of the Chum (Dance) Tomb found in Jian of Jilin Province, China. It dates back to the period of Koguryo (277 BC – AD 668).

The Koguryo people began to draw mural paintings of tomb since around the 3rd century. Those mural paintings depict customs and manners of the people, Four Deities, the combination of the above-mentioned themes, and decorative patterns.

The mural Hunting was drawn in the mid-4th century on the theme of manners and customs of the Koguryo people.

It vividly shows the martial spirit and economic life of the people of Koguryo, a powerful state with a thousand-year history in the East in the middle ages.

The mural is also marked by vigorous and refined tones of the Korean painting as it reflects the life of the people in those days, a feature unique to mural paintings of Koguryo tombs. It pictures a lively, brave and optimistic character of the Koguryo people.

Painted in the mural are five hunters on horseback, wearing headgears decorated with feathers or black hoods, who are aiming their bows at animals following them at the foot of mountains. Their courageous and swift movements are described in powerful strokes. The painting of a tiger and herds of deer running away in haste is indicative of acute situation of hunting.

The mural is drawn by applying the technique of a birds-eye view in a sense of form and various methods of perspective, thus showing the hunting ground immersed in enthusiastic atmosphere.

Forceful and flexible strokes portray vividly the excellent horsemanship and archery of the Koguryo people, and at the same time give feelings as if the animals in the painting are all alive and moving.

The mural Hunting, an excellent tomb mural expressive of indomitable character and dauntless spirit of the Koguryo people, is a valuable cultural heritage showing a high level of the fine arts the Korean nation had attained already in the 4th century.
